

Les Schwab Invitational Media Credential Requirements

Les Schwab Invitational media credentials are reserved for working print, online journalists, broadcast journalists, photographers and sports analysts with commercial news organizations and recognized publications.

Online Scouting / Recruiting Services

Online Scouting / Recruiting Services will be evaluated on an individual basis. If you fall under this category, please provide specific details as to what you plan to cover along with a link to your company's website. If this is a pay service site, you are not eligible for a Les Schwab Invitational media credential.

Freelance Reporters & Photographers

You must be a freelance journalist attending on behalf of at least one publication. Freelance writers from unqualified media outlets are not eligible for press credentials. Qualification of all media outlets will be determined by Prime Time Sports, LLC.

To qualify as media, freelance journalists must provide:

A letter from an editor or producer on organization letterhead stating that you are covering the Les Schwab Invitational on assignment for their news organization. Photographers who plan on taking pictures at the Les Schwab Invitational and selling these photos after the event without permission are not eligible for a Les Schwab Invitational media credential.

The Les Schwab Invitational and Prime Time Sports reserve the right to revoke issued media credentials at any time. Media credentials will not be granted to anyone whose principal purpose, in our judgment, is for reasons other than covering the tournament as working news media.

Please note that submitting a credential request does not guarantee that you will receive media credentials.